HOUSE VOTES TO CONSIDER

The House today voted 322-66 to consider a combined Hawaii-Alaska statehood bill under procedure barring any amendments This procedure was ravored by opponents of statehood for either territory. They figured their chances of defeating the bill were better if no amendments were permitted.

Representative Miller (Rep.), Nebraska, hinted that statehood supporters may offer a motion to send the bill back to the House Insular Affairs Committee with instructions to include an amendment to the Alaska sec-tion desired by President Eisention desired by Fresident Easilehower. The amendment would permit the President to set aside the largely uninhabited northern and western part of Alaska as a military buffer zone with exclusive military jurisdiction.

He Takes Step at Insistence of Macmillan -Session 'at Summit' Would Be Largely Ceremonial.

PARIS, May 9—At the insistnce of Harold Macmillan, the British Foreign Secretary in the Conservative government of Anthony Eden-now facing a critical election-Secretary of State John Foster Dulles has agreed tentatively at least to a meeting of the heads of state of the United States, Britain, France and Russia for some time late in the summer or early in the fall. Whether this tentative agreement will hold beyond the British election date of May 26

s an interesting question,
But, as Macmillan made plain in the opening discussion of the three western powers preceding the meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Council, the Conservatives want to be able to announce that such a meeting "at the summit" will take place, Both President Eisenhower and Dulles have resisted a meeting of heads of state that would tend to be merely a gesture of good will.

In advance of the meet-ing of the heads of state, there would be an announcement to the effect that they would discuss for a brief time two or three days-not the set-tlement of specific issues in dispute in the cold war but the areas to be covered by a meet-ing of the foreign ministers which would follow immediately which would follow immediately afterward. In other words the conference to be attended by Mr. Eisenhower, Premier Bulganin, Eden and Premier Faure of France would be largely ceremorfial in nature, leaving to the foreign ministers the prolonged effect to expect the superconference of the superconfe effort to come to an agreeme if they could, on such speci questions as the unification Germany.

Desire for Peace.

While Macmillan's insistence While Macmillan's insistence has had a great deal to do with what is in effect a reversal of the American position, this has not been the only factor. Throughout western Europe the strongest force today is the desire for peace and a deep underlying fear of nuclear war. One can discern this at once in a hundred different ways.

BIG 4 REPORTED PREPARED TO SIGN LATE THIS WEEK

British Say Russia, Under Western Prodding, Indicates Molotov Will Be in Vienna Fri-

VIENNA, May 9 (AP) - The Big Four foreign ministers were reported ready today to meet here late this week and sign the Austrian independence treaty now being completed by their ssadors to Vienna.

British informants in Paris where the three Western minis-ters are conferring, said Russia has indicated that its foreign minister, V. M. Molotov, would ace them here about Friday for that purpose.

Accordingly, they said, United States Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, British Foreign Secretary Harold Macmillan and French Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay are preparing to fly here Thursday.

The Soviet Union gave the word, the informants reported, win response to a Western query sent urgently to Moscow over the weekend. Diplomatic sources had said previously that formal notes would go to Moscow today.

May Interrupt Red Conference.

Molotov apparently was pre-pared to interrupt a Warsaw eting with foreign ministers of other Communist countries to come here. That meeting, to be-gin Wednesday, has the an-nounced purpose of setting up an Eastern military alliance including East Germany, to counter NATO

Besides signing the treaty here, the Western foreign ministers also are reported planning to spend two or three days in informal discussion with Molotov of the time, place and scope of a projected summer Big Four conference of heads of governments or foreign ministers, aimed to settle East-West tensions in Europe. The British and French favor Switzerland or Stockholm, Sweden, in July.

Austrian Chancellor Raab told

Austrian Chancellor Raab told the international chief editors the international chief editors conference, opening here today, that the treaty negotiations had progressed so far that none of the powers would be willing to take the blame for failure now. More than 120 newspaper and magazine editors were on hand from 28 nations.

Few Issues Unsettled.

Only a few issues were outstanding in the ambassadors' treaty talks, and Allied and Austrian officials expected them to end today or tomorrow. Diplomatic sources in Paris said yesterday some of the hurdles had been cleared over the weekend.

The West Germans do not expect to have their projected 500,000 - man defense force trained for atomic war until 1959. But when the Germans are ready, Allied military leaders think the West's combined forces can reasonably hope to beat back any Russian attack.

As reported from Paris, the Western Big Three agreed they could not promise to go to war to guarantee Austrian neutrality, which the Russians have made their price for ending the occupation. The Austrian government has selected two of Vienna's most splendid palaces, both in the British sector, for the signing ceremonies. The signatures will be affixed in the 200-year-old Belvedere palace. A state banquet and ball will be held in picturesque Schoenbrunn, where Austria's former emperors ruled for more than 250 years.

The envoys must agree also on the time schedule for the withdrawal of the occupation troops—44,000 Russians in East Austria, and some 25,000 American, British and French troops in the western part of the country. The question is whether French informants said their formation.

City, County and East St. Louis Leaders Concerned Over Rise in Betting on Horses and Baseball.

A plan of attack on hoodlumcontrolled illegal horse race and baseball betting operations was discussed today at a meeting in East St. Louis of police officials representing St. Louis, St. Louis county and East St. Louis.

The officials, expressing concern over the resurgence of gambling activities, exchanged information about the extent of the problem within their respective territories and agreed that a co-operative assault would be an important step in curbing the gamblers. amblers.

Commissioner Beebe called the meeting as the result of disclosure by the Post-Dispatch yesterday that the $500,000-a-week baseball-betting business in the St. Louis area had been taken over by a syndicate headed by Frank (Buster) Wortman and Elmer (Dutch) Dowling, East Side gangsters.

The four officials first met in Commissioner Beebe's office in the City Hall and then adjourned to the East St. Louis Police Station next door. There they examined police records of gambling operations on the East Side Information also was exchanged about suspects in the bombing of Beebe's automobile early Saturday. Beebe said he believed the blast was in retaliation for the raid.

PRESIDENT CITED FOR EFFORT TO STOP DISCRIMINATION

WASHINGTON, May 9—President Eisehhower's "high resolve" and progress in combatting racial discrimination were applauded yesterday by the American Jewish Committee's national executive board.

ON INDIAN BURIAL

Frankfurter Says No Decision Was Made on U.N. Issue Raised in Appeal of Iowa Case.

WASHINGTON, May 9 (AP)-The Supreme Court today threw out a widely publicized suit challenging the right of an Iowa cemetery to refuse burial to an American Indian soldier killed

One issue raised in the appeal was whether the Iowa Supreme Court had flouted the United Nations charter in denying the soldier's widow the right to sue the cemetery for damages.

Today's action—taken by a 5-to-3 vote—voided a 4-to-4 decision last Nov. 15 upholding the sion last Nov. 15 upholding the lowa court.

Speaking for the court majority, Justice Frankfurter said there was "no basis for any inference that the '(4-to-4) division of this court reflected any diversity of opinion" on the United Nations Charter, Warren and Justice Douglas.

The practical effect of today's action is to leave the case as it was so far as the parties are concerned, but to serve notice generally that the tribunal had not gone into the question of the United Nations charter.

The appeal was filed by Mrs. Evelyn Rice, white widow of Sgt. John Rice, who eventually was buried with full honors in Arlington National Cemetery.

Frankfurter's Meaning.

Presumably Frankfurter meant that the court's November decision was based on other grounds than the question of whether the United Nations Charter supercedes the United States Constitution. This has never been passed on directly by the Supreme Court. Lower courts have held that the United Nations Charter in no way supercedes laws governing internal affairs.

Harlan took no part in consideration of the case.

Frankfurter said the Supreme Court made a mistake in first accepting the widow's case for review. He said the writ of review had to be dismissed as "improvidently granted" and the November decision vacated.

Joining Frankfurter in the majority were Justices Reed, Burton, Clark and Minton, Justice Black wrote a dissenting opinion joined by Chief Justice Warren and Justice Douglas.

The practical effect of today's action is to leave the case as it was so far as the parties are concerned, but to serve notice generally that the tribunal had not gone into the question of the United Nations Charter.

EHIND the dizzying twists and turns of American Far Eastern policy in the last two years, there has been a single solid ect that you could, so to speak, safely hang your hat on. At about the time of the Korean truce, President Eisenhowe and the National Security Council formally adopted a new Pacific strategy—the strategy of "the island chain." This strategy of the island chain has been and is the inner, unspoken explanation, the unseen mainspring, of every Washington debate and decision about Asia since it was adopted.

On the one hand, those like the Pacific to put in your eye—Adm. Arthur Radford who have four and a half divisions and two advocated a bold American line combat teams in the Far East advocated a bold American line in Asia, have really been arguing that boldness was needful to defend the island chain on which our strategy is founded.
On the other hand, those like command, with one Marine divi-sion still slated to go home. Throw in the 40-odd divisions of South Korea and Nationalist China and the other little bits

On the other hand, those like the President himself and in a different sense Gen. Matthew Ridgway, who have voted down Adm. Radford and his group, have justified retreat in Asia on the ground that American interests in the Pacific only required holding the island chain and did not really extend further.

Variant of Acheson Pollcy.
In brief, it is a variant of the famous "American line" in the Pacific that former Secretary of State Dean Acheson has been so much denounced for defining just prior to the Korean war. The island chain which this strategy requires to be held by the United States runs from Kiska and Attu, through Japan and Oktawa to Formore and and Okinawa, to Formosa and the Philippines. South Korea is included as an outpost of Japan. South Korea is ultimately to be defended as Formosa is now defended, by what the Pentagon likes to call "indigenous" forces sustained by an American guar-antee and air and naval support in case of attack.

On the offensive side, enemy aggression is to be met by air-atomic "massive retaliation," Formosa.

These are the basic ABCs of Eisenhower Administration policymaking in the Pacific. But in the context of the continuing crisis in the Formosa strait, th crisis in the Formosa strait, the question now has to be asked whether these ABCs which seem so sensible on the surface, in fact add up to valid strategy when one looks beneath the sur-

When one performs this dis-turbing operation, the first hidden fact that strikes the eye is the obvious insufficiency of our forces in the Pacific to hold this island chain that they are supissand chain that they are sup-posed to hold. If you assume that we are going to use the ab-solute weapons, and the enemy, who also has these weapons, is not going to use them, every-thing is OK. But everything is make this highly peculiar assumption.

Scheele Text: U.S. Has Faith in Polio Vaccine -But Plans Reappraisal of Each Batch Made

Salk Preparation to Be Cleared Lot by Lot Beginning This Week.

WASHINGTON (AP). Following is the text of yesterday's statement by Surgeon Gen. Leonard A. Scheele on the Salk vaccine:

KNOW that the American people are concerned over re-cent developments with respect to the nation-wide poliomyelitis vaccination program.

As surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, my primary responsibility is to assure that our nation's health is protected and that we make continuing progress against disease.

In this capacity, I want first and foremost to assure the parents of children who have re-ceived an injection of poliomye-litis vaccine this spring that in the very best judgment of the Public Health Service, they have no cause for alarm.

Yesterday, May 7, I recom-mended that the vaccinations im-mediately scheduled be post-poned pending this report. This action was taken because ance the vast ground armies of Red China, the 20 divisions of several states are now in the midst of or are about to start inoculation programs. Since the final evaluation by a fact-finding group which has been constituted in the constitute of the consti the Vietminh and the powerful Russian infantry in eastern Siing group which has been consulting with us on the cumulative experience in the manufacture and testing of the Salk vaccine had not been completed, it seemed the wisest—and the safest course—to advise the health authorities of the nation of this fact. This might not be so disquieting, if the air and naval balance were as favorable as the island chain strategy obviously de-mands. But it is precisely at this point that American self-delusion begins in earnest. The air forces or our side that are worth considering are as follows:

Discussing age levels of the Eighty-fourth Congress, the bureau found it "is definitely dominated by oldsters." But, "with a majority of one seat in the Senate and 29 seats in the House, youth favors the Democrats," the bureau added.

"Consequently, the Republicans stand to lose more seats through death during the current session of Congress," although the odds are "not overwhelming," the private research organization said in a report.

The refort commented also on two prevising ideas about old age in United States, one that the increasing number of elderly persons is due in part to scientific advances lengthening the life span, the other that the life expectancy of older persons is increasing.

The bureau quoted a United Nations expert as asying "the main cause for the aging of the United States population is its declining fertility, rather than increased longevity."

On the subject of life expectancy, the report said: "As much as modern medicine and technology have done to defer death,"

School Taxes in Riverview tor of the Post-Dispatch

3-I find that many negative votes have been cast on the proposed school tax increase in the Riverview Dis-trict because of misconceptions as to what is involved.

what is involved.

There are those who feel that the approval of the proposed levy will lacrease the taxes far out of proportion to what they paid last year. Actually, only 45 cents per $100 assessment is all the increase that the levy would permit. Ten cents of this has already been approved by a vote in January's election. So, actually, there is only a 35-cent increase asked for. Most people feel that a negative vote on this levy will do nothing more than to defeat the 35-cent increase. The levy in excess of the more than to defeat the 35-cent in-ference. The levy in excess of the $1.60 which the Board of Education may assess without vote of the peo-ple must be approved each year. In other words, defeat of this measure Would result in a cut from the $3.50 paid in the current year to $1.60 for the year 1955-56. It is obvious that our schools could not long exist un-der such circumstances. such circumstances.

ome people have voted against levy because of the confusion Some people have voted against the levy because of the confusion exciting in regard to reassessment of edunty property. The school board libs issued a public statement that if velues are increased, school taxes values are increased, school taxes will be reduced in proportion.

Furthermore, if our schools are to meet the growing need of the community they serve, the full $3.95 levy must be voted. Anything less would impair the efficiency of an ingitution which is one of the foundation stones of the kind of society we want for our community and for our world. Defeat of the levy would be a lot more expensive in the long fun than the additional money taxphers would pay if the levy is approved.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH Hell's Canyon's New Look

The results of a year's hearings are in, and they give Secretary McKay ample cause for an agonizing reappraisal of his duty at Hell's Canyon.

This waterpower site on the Snake river, a tributary of the Columbia, on the Idaho-Oregon border, is one of the richest remaining undeveloped in the nation. It is situated in a region which has been held back by inadequate supplies of electric power, and which needs its waterpower potential developed to the maximum.

A high dam at Hell's Canyon to achieve maximum development there was planned by the Reclamation Bureau of the Department of the Interior until Mr. McKay became Secretary. He then announced that he was relinquishing the site in favor of the Idaho Power Co. That private utility had applied to build two low dams, Brownlee and Hell's Canyon, along the same stretch of river, with the possibility of building a third, Oxbow, at some later date.

It is this three-dam system whose merits a Federal Power Commissioner examiner has gone into, and compared with the originally proposed Bureau of Reclamation project, in hearings extending over a year.

Examiner William J. Costello now concludes in effect that the federal project would be preferable if it were going to be built, but that it is not going to be built and therefore the Idaho Power Dam project is preferable.

On this line of reasoning, Henry Ford's plan for private exploitation of Muscle Shoals would have been "preferable" to TVA. But is it the FPC's job to estimate the political prospects of controversial projects? The real question for the FPC to decide is whether this finding follows the mandate laid by Congress upon the FPC to issue licenses only for projects "best adapted to a comprehensive plan for improving or developing a waterway."

Of the three dams in the proposed Idaho Power system, the examiner recommends that the FPC license only Brownlee. FPC's legal staff had earlier recommended licensing of all three projects. Examiner Costello says the cost of producing power would be raised to more than 6 mills a kilowatt-hour if Oxbow and Hell's Canyon were added to the Brownlee project. No market could reasonably be predicted for the power at so high a price, he says, and construction of the second and third dams is therefore "clearly not in the public interest." This despite the fact that "there is a crying need for firmpower additions in the Northwest."

Secretary McKay himself two years ago observed that the Northwest was "critically short of power." Arguing that the Idaho Power Co. project could begin overcoming that shortage sooner than the public project, he contended that the power generated at three low dams would be 87 per cent of that generated at one high dam.

Now, however, Idaho Power's three low dams have shrunk to one low dam. And if only Brownlee dam were built, in accordance with the examiner's recommendations, the amount of power realized from the Hell's Canyon stretch of the Snake river would be only 40 per cent of what one high public dam would supply. If Brownlee were built, moreover, it would forever foreclose the high dam, by standing in the area which the latter's reservoir would have to occupy.

Is the Pacific Northwest—is the nation—going to be content with less than half-way development of the rich and much-needed power potential at Hell's Canyon?

Now that the allegations of fact on which Secretary McKay sought to justify his relinquishment of the site no longer apply, will the Secretary reinstate the federal project, or will he insist on an extravagant waste of over half, the usefulness of this great natural resource?

Lawyers Against the Broyles Bills One of the most gratifying developments in Illinois in a long time is the way in which groups of lawyers are coming out against the so-called Broyles bills which seek to compel patriotism by loyalty oaths, Communist outlawry and related ill-advised restrictions.

The Chicago Bar Association took its stand several weeks ago and even earlier the Madison County Bar Association placed itself squarely on record against invasions of the area of the mind and conscience. Now the Board of Governors of the Illinois Bar Association, meeting at Rockford, has called the Broyles proposals "detrimental to civil rights." The bills are so vague, says the bar group, that they "attack the free expression of ideas" and hence in their revised form "still present a grave peril."

This ought to be enough for the Broyles bills. Back in 1949 they died in the Illinois House after passing the State Senate. The House would serve Illinois by burying them again.

The Twenty-fourth Choice

The May 26 ballot will offer 23 choices in connection with the proposed municipal bond issue. That is a fair stint of voting. But there will also be a twenty-fourth choice. It will appear on a separate ballot, and we trust it will not be overlooked. Approval of the $16,395,000 school improvement bonds is every bit as important as any of the items in the municipal list.

How seriously St. Louis needs educational facilities of various kinds is factually set forth in a report of the Capital Needs Planning Committee of the Board of Education.

No doubt, new school buildings for the housing projects and elsewhere in the city have the greatest physical appeal. They also call for most of the money. But there is an equal urgency about some of the shortcomings of the existing system.

A good example is the proposed cafeteria-gymnasium-auditorium building for Harris Teachers' College, one of the lesser items so far as cost is concerned. The college now attempts to feed more than 1000 students in a makeshift cafeteria which is just a wide basement corridor and must be used as such at all times. Although it is lowceilinged, poorly ventilated and noisy, it also is the only space available to students in periods during which they have no classes.

Another example of woeful improvisation is the less than ample space in the Wade Elementary School, approximately a mile from South west High School, used for home economics and shop courses for Southwest pupils.

Although the newest of the city's high schools, Southwest lacks a gymnasium and adequate playing field. The board proposes to build a gymnasium at the new technical high school near South Kingshighway and Northrup. These facilities would be used by all South Side high schools for the athletic programs now conducted in rented space. Numerous replacements and modernizations are proposed for older school buildings. These nges and repairs would help to adjust the teacher-pupil ratio where it is highest, and pupil-teacher ratio in St. Louis has grown so bad that even the average is exceeded only in Washington, Chicago, Baltimore and Houston, none cited as models for public education.

It is to be hoped that the citizens' committee can enlist the required support at the polls be-cause, in a way, schools may be considered the decisive issue as the city chooses between progress and decay.

Too Much Stop and Go

Either the Public Health Service is not dealing frankly with the American people, or it is adding one more unnecessary confusion to a rather impressive list of confusions in the Hollywoodized distribution of Salk polio vaccine.

The decision to recommend continued suspension of vaccinations until a plant-by-plant survey of the manufacturing process has been made may conceivably have some scientific justifica-But if so, the reason has not been made

Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele declares that the Public Health Service has "every faith" in the safety and effectiveness of the Salk vaccine. He says that except among children inoculated with Cutter vaccine, the incidence of polio among vaccinated children is only one in 700,000, which is no greater than the expected natural occurrence of polio among these children at this time of year.

If that is true, then what good reason can there be for suspending inoculations with vaccine from any of the laboratories except Cutter? Why should not those supplies of vaccine continue to be used? Why is the reason for using them not as good now as it was when the Public Health Service first authorized their use?

This is the point that will bother many parents. Assuming that a further check of the manufacturers is desirable before going ahead with the vaccination program, why did not Dr. Scheele and Secretary Hobby provide for such a check in the beginning?

No vaccine was distributed at all until these authorities gave their approval. Was that approval based on adequate scientific counsel at the time? Or was it, like so many aspects of the whole affair from the beginning, affected by the circus atmosphere, the TV cameras, the screaming headlines and the excitement which result when science is glamorized as a show?

We have a strong conviction that Dr. Jonas Salk knew what he was doing, that the doctors who checked the results of last year's mass tests knew what they were doing, and that the Salk vaccine will eventually prove to be all that Dr. Salk and his associates expected it to be. But it is time that somebody brought a little restraint and common sense into a mass vaccination program which cannot be subjected to sudden stops and starts without impairing public confidence in those who are directing it.

Just for the Record

The debate over farm price supports has become so empty and sterile that little meaning can be attached to the House vote to restore supports at 90 per cent of parity on five major crops.

By dint of strenuous effort, Speaker Rayburn managed to win a 5-vote margin for this move to overturn the Administration program of flexible price support levels. But the roll call was entirely for the record. Next year, the Democrats will point to this roll call as striking evidence that only their party loves the farmer sufficiently to qualify for farm votes.

Secretary Benson characterizes the vote as pretty much a political one," and so it was. owever, it is probably unreasonable to expect that politicians seeking support among farmers shall refrain from passing bills designed to prove their friendship for farmers. What can be fairly asked is that such politicians should find some more imaginative, constructive and original way of demonstrating that friendship than the stale and hackneyed device of adding a few percentage points to the level of price support.

It should be clear by now that such farm in come losses as have occurred cannot be blamed on flexible price supports. For they have occurred while 90 per cent supports were still in practical effect on most crops. The principle of flexible supports, adopted by a Democratic Congress in 1949 as well as by a Republican Congress last year, is entitled to a fair trial.

Unnecessary But Prompt Warning Quite naturally there were some anxious m ments out on the West Coast last week when a "yellow alert," signifying enemy planes on the way, was sounded in several cities. It was due to a communications delay in a routine training exercise involving the Strategic Air Command

Continental Air Defense Command, which did not receive the flight plan notification in time. Such occurences were not uncommon in war time. SAC and CADC probably profited by the foulup. And at least the unnecessary alert was given promptly. At Pearl Harbor the officer in charge of the radar ignored the warning and a

Still Five Years Away

In the H. G. Wells era, writers about the future generally placed their stories in the next century. George Orwell dared not bring his horrors closer than 1984. And present-day science fiction writers are rather vague about dates. But now comes the Twentieth Century Fund with a report that makes no pretense at fiction, and it tells about the transformed world of 1960-just five years ahead.

There will be collision-proof automobiles. Soap and water will have been eliminated from the cleaning process by vibrating sound waves. A single farm implement will do the work of 40 Fertilizer no longer will be smelly. Homes will be heated without fuels and fire hazards. Many of us will carry palm-sized sending and receiving radio equipment. Mail will be moved almost at the speed of light. And there will be push buttons all over the place.

Yet a little reading between the lines suggests that all these gadgets will not change the world very much after all. There will still be unemployment and money worries. The work-week will be down to 371/2 hours, but men still will come home tired and moody-even if they will have the benefit of tinted, vitamin-generating lights. The housewife will find new duties re placing old chores.

But what is most arresting about these prophecles, factual and fictional, is that they indicate such a high degree of pre-occupation with the future—a future which, bombs or no bombs, many of us may not see. Has the present become just an obstacle to be overcome to reach and enjoy the future-in this case, the five-years-away future of the Twentieth Century Fund? Should we remind ourselves that, no matter how scientifically projected, futures are always dream worlds, that satisfaction lies in today's tasks and today's rewards?

The equalization of property assessments (and keeping them equalized) is probably the most important single tax step that any state can undertake. It is also the most difficult.

The truth is that equalization looks toward the disturbance of a great va-riety of vested interests in favorable or ally.

Let me tell you, briefly, how I like to approach a demand for new taxes:

Of 100pholes and inequities in the present tax structure. Plug up the 100pholes and iron out the inequities. It may amaze you how much new money this may properly provide.

Think second— Of new methods of finance. How can this service be made to pay for itself?

How can a proposal be contained within its original purpose? Examine departmental revenues, audit grants-in-aid, avoid dedicated funds and explore, where appropriate, the use of the public authority.

Think last—
Of new taxes. But if you must face them, be prepared. Define your comparative tax burdens; consider the productive capacities of your jurisdiction; measure the impact of the tax load; examine tax allocations as among various classes of property and taxpayers; and be certain your present tax structure is doing what it should, before urging new taxes.

And there is one other matter: Know what you are asking for, know how you propose to do it, and do not ask for the

Think Last of New Taxes

The Mirror Public Opinio

Such is the advice to Missouri of Princeton professor and state tax expert; he finds tax structure moderate and well balanced; if new revenue needed, he urges first attention to plugging loopholes, ending inequities; calls equal assessments most important.

From an Address by Dr. John F. Sly, Princeton University School of Public and International Affairs, Before the Missouri League of Women Voters

Missouri can be classified as a broad-base tax state. It depends on sales and gross receipts taxes for 41 per cent of its state revenue, on motor fuel taxes for 17 per cent, on motor vehicle licenses for 12 per cent, on income taxes for 12 per cent, and on other taxes for 18 per cent.

Missouri thus has a well balanced tax missouri thus has a well balanced tax program. It is moderately priced and competitively adjusted. It indicates that if new tax revenues are necessary, they can be raised within the present tax structure. Missouri has a tax potential that, comparatively speaking, can be used without undue strain, if the occasion requires. I cannot speak on the need for more tax money in Missouri. That is a decision peculiar to the wishes and the values of the people who live here. But I note that two major points of view have been expressed:

First, that an increase of 1 per cent in the retail sales tax would yield approximately $45,000,000 a year, exceeding all foresceable demands. Secondly, an increase in income tax rates would be more readily received if taxpayers felt assured that all taxpayers were navfelt assured that all taxpayers were ing their share. It has been stated that probably 100,000 taxpayers are now escaping, in whole or in part, the income tax, and that the first source of new revenue should be to bring them into the fold.

These are certainly sensible objectives, and far more enlightened than the usual arguments against tax in-

It is sound tax policy (with due regard for a prudent surplus) to take in taxes only what is necessary to meet approved expenditures. It is not practical to have fractional rates in a consumer sales tax.

There is no reason, however, for loss of revenue under an income tax because of lax collections. Six states (Oregon, Delaware, Vermont, Arizona, Colorado and Vertocky), now have withhelding and Kentucky) now have withholding provisions for their income tax. The Indiana Commission on State Tax and Financing Policy made an extensive study of withholding. The proponents saw additional revenue, uniform treatment, and increased administrative efficiency. The opponents were apprehensived. ciency. The opponents were apprehen-sive of additional paper work for business establishments, reluctant to foster a policy of "hidden taxes," and feared another step toward what they called "socialism." The Indiana Commission, itself, has not been able to agree.

Before increasing income tax yields,

Story of an Orphan Boy THE MISSOURI TRAVELER, by John Burress. (Yanguard Press, 281 pgs., $3.50.)

The Missouri traveler in this instance The Missouri traveler in this instance was only a boy, though an overgrown one, and he didn't travel very far. That was because when he ran away from the orphans' home he came to the little town of Delhi in Southeast Missouri and there found shelter in an abandoned house and good friends who admired his manliness and helped him transform it into a home. Even when they learned that Biarn Turner wasn't his true name and that the law was after him to take him back to the orphans' home they stood by him and helped him make a man of himself, with no wish to travel farther in Missouri than the little town of Delhi.

There isn't much new in this one, which pictorially covers American railroads from woodburners to diesels and even a Talgo-style train. Many of the pictures are fresh; others have been supplied by railroad publicity offices, including the Missouri Pacific Lines. There isn't any evil in this, except that the author has made no attempt to counter a lack of apecific identification.

From Pigeon Run to Big Steel From The Wall Street Journal

Some years ago there was a lot of unemployment in the country and Gen. Coxey was in Massillon. Ohio, gathering an army of unemployed to march again on Washington to protest hard times.

A young man named Ben Fairless took an interurban into the town to see what was going on. But along the way he noticed workmen clearing the site for a new Central Steel company plant just outside the town. Young Fairless hopped off the train and got himself employed then and there.

then and there.
During the years when other men thought that the new frontiers and far horizons were no longer a part of the American scene, Ben Fairless kept making his own opportunities; during the times when people looked to government for the main chance Ben Fairless looked only to himself, to his company, and to the people who tended the furnaces, who poured the steel and who sold it.

Mr. Fairless was a reasonable man who understood another's problems but who also stood his ground when he thought that he was right. Thus he led the successful fight against Government the successful ight against Government seizure of the steel companies. Thus he led the fight within his company for better understanding with its labor force and union. He did much to end the remoteness with which labor and management had long regarded one another.

Many maxims will be drawn about op-portunity from the career of this man who went from a coal miner's modest home in Pigeon Run in Ohio to the job of heading up the vast complex that makes United States Steel the largest in the world.

And doubtless the maxims will all be true for the opportunities are always there for an able man who sees them. But they serve best the man who makes his own chance while others look to Washington.

POET SAYS POETRY NEEDS DISCIPLINE

Physician-Writer, Lecturing Here, Stresses Importance of Form

Discipline is necessary in writing poetry as in other arts, and most free verse being produced today is "completely formless and unsatisfactory," Dr. William Carlos Williams, New Jersey poet and physician, said last night at Washington University.

Dr. Williams, delivering the first lecture in the 1955 Oreon E. Scott symposium on "The Writer and His Public," said Walt Whitman's verse liberated poets from the past but "an aimless freedom was soon found to be unsatisfactory."

said Whitman, nineteenth century American poet, had thrown overboard the old techniques. That was good, he said, but the subsequent trend was to write poems that were mere outlines. "We took too much for granted," he said. "We overestimated our audience (or ignored it altogether). What we put down was really only an outline, a syllabus of a poem, for the reader to fill in if he had the power. It was too much to ask."

Posed with his trainer MESHACH (MICKEY) TENNEY, Kentucky Derby winner SWAPS appears to be taking the ride home in stride just as he took the Louisville classic. They had a layover here today at Union Station en route to California where Swaps will race next at Hollywood. At right, all the picture-taking commotion causes Swaps to peek out from the "Horse Express" car in which he had the private compartment while four other horses in the car had narrow stalls. Trainer Tenney said there was no chance the stable would change its mind and make Swaps a supplemental entry in the Preakness.

O 10 years ago, easy—a boy of eight or nine would wander across Oakland avenue into Forest Park and gather mushrooms. He and his friends had found they could sell the mushrooms—and money, then as now, was an interesting thing, if you could get it.

One day, as he recalled it many years later, they wandered far afield and came upon the green expanse of the golf course on the other side of the park—there to discover another way of accumulating some of the calls.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 9
(AP) — Rex Ellsworth and Meshach (Mickey) Tenney, a couple of wiry ex-cowpunchers from the West, will return next year in quest of their second straight Kentucky Derby victory with a horse they rate better than Swaps.

And that is saying a lot, for Swaps whipped the mighty Nashua and eight other 3-yearolds last Saturday in one of the fastest Derbles in the 81-year history of the turf classic. Time for the mile and one-quarter of the $152,500 race was two minutes, one and four-fifths second, just two-fifths of a second off the track and Derby record set by Whirlaway in 1941.
Ellsworth and trainer Tenney,

Ellsworth and trainer Tenney, close friends since childhood, shipped Swaps yesterday to Hollywood Park in California, where the colt's next big engagement will be in the $50,000-added Westerner on July 9. The Westerner is at the same distance as the Derby.

"Our 1956 Derby candidate is Like Magic, a full brother of Swaps," said Ellsworth. "He's a great big old colt with something to learn but we think he is a better horse than Swaps." Swaps and Like Magic were sired by Khaled, reported to have cost Ellsworth $60,000 when purchased from the Aga Khan in England. Their dam is Iron Reward and through her lineage they trace their blood lines to War Admiral, winner of the 1937 Kentucky Derby, and the mighty Man O'War.

Made Bad Guess on Swaps.

Ellsworth and Tenney, who breed horses on their 300-acre farm at Ontario, Calif., and have another 250,000 acres of range land in Arizona, didn't enter Swaps in either the Preakness or the Belmont Stakes. They didn't think he was good enough. The Preakness will be run May 28 and the Belmont June 11.

"But we'll not make that mistake with Like Magic if he continues to develop," said Tenney. "In fact right now we plan to bring him back east for the Garden State Stakes next fall."

Lou Pondfield, Pimlico's executive director, made a strong plea to have Swaps made a supplementary entry for the Preakness at the cost of $7500. But Swaps' raw-boned policy makers refused to change their plans and the winner of the richest of all Kentucky Derbies entrained last night with Tenney, as usual, bedded down alongside the newest toast of the turf.

He was up a little later than usual for together with Ellsworth and a host of friends they celebrated their first try. But there was no raising of mint julep glasses by either Ellsworth or Tenney. For as members of the Mormon faith they abstain from alcoholic beverages.

Smith and Rosen Star In 2 Wins

NEW YORK, May 9 (UP)—
They can't match the Brooklyn Dodgers' astounding start but the Cleveland Indians today zoomed far ahead of the pace which carried them to a record
111 victories and the American League championship in 1954.
After their 9-6 and 2-1 sweep of the Kansas City Athletics yesterday, the Indians held a twogame first place lead with a 17-7 record and .708 percentage. Just x year ago they were in third place with a 12-8 mark and a 1500 percentage. They didn't take the lead until May 16.
Rightfielder Al Smith and First-Baseman Al Rosen were the stars as the Indians achieved a tidy four-game winning streak and resided off their right; in 10

dians' second of this season. They took 13 of 19 bargain bills last year.

Smith, 26-year-old native of St. Louis hammered out three home runs during the double-header. He blasted a pair of two-run blows as the Tribe battled back from an early 5-0 deficit in the opener and then broke rookie Art Ceccarelli's spell with a third homer which produced a 1-1 tie in the seventh inning of the nightcap.

Rosen's Homer Decides Game.

The deadlock lasted until the eleventh inning when Rosen, filling in at first base for Vic Wertz, blasted his fifth round-tripper. Art Houtteman gained credit for his third win in relief of Bob Feller in the first game while Ray Narleski, Cleveland's third pitcher, was the winner in the second contest.

The late drives by Smith and Rosen ruined a brilliant five-hit performance by Ceccarelli, a 25-year-old lefthander who had a 15-12 record for Birmingham in 1954. Ceccarelli struck out 10 but suffered his first big league defeat.

but suffered his first big league defeat.

The runaway Dodgers rolled to their twenty-first victory in 23 games, 9-3 over the Philadelphia Phillies. Gil Hodges hit a two-run homer and Duke Snider a grand-slammer as the Dodgers built a 9-2 lead. The Phillies battled back in the late innings before Jim Hughes finally stopped them and sealed their ninth straight defeat—high for the 1955 campaign.

The New York Yankees finally eaught up with "jinx-pitcher" Willard Nixon in a 5-0 win over the Boston Red Sox and the Chicago White Sox downed the Detroit Tigers, 5-4 and 1-0 in a pair of thrillers. The Washington Senators crushed the Baltimore Orioles, 15-7, after a 4-3 loss in the other American League games.

Grim's First Victory.

Bob Grim, a 20-game winner in 1954, won his first 1955 game with ninth-inning relief aid from Jim Konstanty to give the Yankees their fourth consecutive win. Joe Collins and Hank Bauer homered off Nixon, who had beaten the Yankees six straight times and hadn't lost to them since Sept. 24, 1950.

Nelson Fox drove in the winning run with an eleventh-inning single in the opener and tripled, and scored the only run of the second game for the White Sox. Fox's second-game hit enabled Dick Donovan to best Frank Lary in a fine duel of rookie pitchers.

Eddie Waitkus' two-run ninth inning triple enabled the Orioles to win their opener but the Senators came back with a 15-hit attack featured by homers by Tom Umphlett and Jesse Levan in the second game.

Willie Mays had four hits and Don Mueller ran his hitting streak to 21 games as the New york Giants beat the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6-3. The Pirates won the opener, 7-5, as Dick Groat, Gerry Lynch and Gene Freese homered. In other N.L. games, the Cincinnati Redlegs beat the Chicago Cubs, 4-3, on Hobie Landrith's second homer of the game after Sam Jones won his third game for Cubs, 5-3, in the opener.

A St. Louis group, conducting a ticket-selling campaign that may bring the city a probasketball franchise next season, headed toward its deadline today.

Seeking to sell 1000 season tickets, the group hopes to persuade the owner of the Milwaukee Hawks to transfer the franchise here.

Because the National Basketball Association is to meet tomorrow at New York where the fate of the Hawks may be determined, this could be the last day of grace for the St. Louis group. Jules Schweig, head of the local committee said the total of tickets sold would not be known until all agencies had reported.

TWO MEN FOUND FATALLY WOUNDED

Police Surmise One Shot the Other and Then Ended Own Life.

Henry Bowers, a retired coal miner, and Joseph Stosius, an unemployed factory worker, were shot to death Saturday night in their home at 358 East Wickliffe avenue, Collinsville. Police said it was murder and suicide.

Bowers, 73 years old, collapsed on the rear porch of a neighbor's home with a bullet wound in the chest. The neighbor summoned police who forced their way into the pair's home.

They found Stosius, 62, lying on the bedroom floor with a wound in his chest. A .32-caliber revolver with six discharged cartridges in it was on the floor beside him.

He was dead on arrival at St.

Mary's Hospital in *East St.

Louis and Bowers died there after.

Stosius apparently fired five shots at Bowers, police said, although only one bullet struck him. Then he used the remaing cartridge to shoot himself, police surmised.

The pair occupied a four-room home. Police reported they level that is detectable by laboratory tests made in tissue culture and in monkeys or is expected to be harmful to man.

In this respect, this vaccine is similar to other vaccines prepared in a similar way.

I want to make this point absolutely clear. The vaccine has been called a "killed" vaccine because of the theoretical total inactivation of virus particles with respect to their ability to cause disease in man—a fact which is borne out by the safety record among the 5,000,000 American children who have received one or more injections of the Salk vaccine.

We have derived valuable data from the manufacturers themselves. They have brought to us honestly and fully the sum total of their manufacturing experience and their professional skill. They—since the very beginning of the polio vaccine program—have acted with complete integrity and foresight. Our inquiry has revealed that they have, in many instances, gone far beyond the normal requirements of the pharmaceutical industry in checking existing procedures and making improvements as new information became available to them. To no small extent, the speed and efficiency with which we have been able to review an exceedingly complex situation is due to the aid of the senior professional staff of the manufacturers.

We have been guided, too, by a continuing flow of detailed inverse and making improvements as new information became available to them. Greece and Yugoslavia is "developing successfully in all fields and conditions and exist for its further successful development," an official communique said last night. The three countries concluded a Balkan alliance last year.

The communique was issued fin connection with the visit of Turkish Premier Adnan Menderes. He has had several talks with Marshal Tito and other Yukgoslav officials since his arrival Wednesday.

It also was announced that a five-year economic agreement between Turkey and Yugoslavia was signed here yesterday. The agreement provides for Turkish delivery of wheat and cotton to Yugoslavia and mutual credits.

The communique said the toprung talks "have given an opportunity for a frank exchange of opinions" on the general international situation.

The communique said Vice President Edward Kardelj and Foreign Secretary Koca Popovic have accepted an invitation from Menderes to visit Turkey in September. Members will leave today.

The Francis report on the first or second injection without indicating that the vaccine is unsafe or ineffective.

of poliomyelitis vaccine.

It is evident that the decision of the service will cause some delay in making the vaccine available to the American peope. I know that they will fully understand and appreciate the reasons for this decision which has been taken in their interest and on behalf of the children of the nation. There will in time be ample safe vaccine for all who need it and wish it.

In summary, may I say that the Salk vaccine has had careful and thorough development over a long period of time. It has emerged, as the culmination of the work of dedicated men and of the historic achievement of one of them, Dr. Jonas Salk. His achievement is a milestone of medical progress. It promises significant reduction in the occurrence of paralytic poliomyelitis.

Although there have been some changes in language, his proposed amendment is substantially the same as the one which the Senate rejected after a heated floor fight last year. President Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, who successfully opposed the amendment last year, are just as strongly opposed to this year's revised version.

Here is a section-by-section analysis of the 1955 version of the Bricker amendment, with arguments pro and con:

the Bricker amendment, with arguments pro and con:
SECTION 1
Article VI, paragraph 2 of the present Constitution says that "the supreme law of the land" shall include (1) the Constitution itself; (2) laws passed by Congress "m pursuance of" the Constitution, and (3) treaties made "under the authority of the United States."

Bricker says this language puts treaties in a special legal category so that, unlike laws, they do not have to conform to the Constitution.

the Constitution.

He would remedy this by Section 1 of his amendment which states:

"A provision of a treaty or other international agreement which conflicts with this Constitution, or which is not made in pursuance thereof, shall not be the supreme law of the land nor be of any force or effect."

The Administration contends that Supreme Court rulings al-

WASHINGTON, May 9 (UP)—
The battle of the Bricker amendment is on again.
Senator John W. Bricker (Rep.) Ohio, is trying for the second year in a row to push through a far-reaching change in the provisions of the United States Constitution that deal with treaties.

Although there have been some changes in language, his

New Phrase. New Phrase.

However, the Administration points out that Bricker's language goes considerably beyond this and also requires that treaties and executive agreements be made "in pursuance of the Constitution." This is a new phrase that was not in last year's version of the amendment.

Dulles told the Senate subcommittee in recent testimony that the "pursuance" phrase could be interpreted by the courts to mean that the Federal Government has no power to negotiate a treaty that would regulate any matter that the Constitution places in the states' rights category.

He said that would automatically invalidate about 30 per cent of this country's treaties, including those which deal with extradition, narcotics control, property rights of foriegn nationals, hunting seasons for migratory birds and the like.
Bricker told the subcommittee the phrase would serve to "reinforce" other limitations on the International agreement."

In last year's version, this section was worded "...legislation which would be valid ... etc.," and became known as "the which clause," the most controversial section of the amendment. Bricker dropped the "which" this year and it is now sometimes referred to as "the whichless which clause."

Bricker says this section

Bricker says this section would provide two necessary safeguards:

First, it would prevent the President from making "one-man law" through executive agreements, which at present are not subject to Senate ratification or any other congressional action.

Second, it would stop the Federal Government from accomplishing by international treaty a type of domestic regulation which it is constitutionally forbidden to undertake by ordinary laws.

Dulles, on the other hand, called this section "a revolutionary provision" which would require action by each of the 48 state Legislatures to ratify the numerous treaties mentioned previously that touch on some "states' rights" matter.

This he said would wine out

SECTION 2.

This section of the Bricker Amendment simply requires that when a treaty is up for ratification, the Senate must take a roll call vote—thus insuring that at least a quorum of 49 members will be present. It is designed to prevent repetition of some past instances in which non-contro-

Section 2 of the revised Bricker amendment would provide that:

"A treaty or other international agreement shall become effective as internal law in the United States only through legislation valid in the absence of international agreement."

Which become effective if ratified with only a handful of senators voting.

Dulles remarked in his testimony that a roll call vote "seems a clearly desirable procedure to stitutional amendment is necessary."

Come On Outside

LIVE UNDER SUMMER SKIES

by Dorothy Brainerd

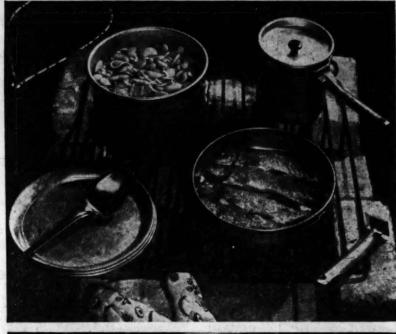

Father finds the informality of the barbecue pit much more to his liking than the candle-lit, crystal-andsterling winter dinner parties; Mother knows that willing hands will share in the work as well as in the fun.

Of course the term "out-of-door living" can mean anything from caviar canapes and strawberry sherbet served in a landscaped garden to a teen ager's slightly scorched marshmallow toasted over a campfire. But to most of us it means lazy hours with good companions, and a back yard bill of fare of juicy spareribs, crisp golden chicken, grilled steaks and barbecued franks.

So make it as plush or as simple as you wish, but don't miss out on the fun. Come on outside and live, really live, under the sunny skies and the starry skies of summer.

PRIVATE POOLS GAIN IN POPULARITY HERE

There was a time when it was generally conceded that a private pool was the badge of a millionaire, but now a pool in one's own backyard may cost no more than a car at one's front door.

St. Louisans, who within recent years have discovered a whole new world of pleasure in out-of-door living, are finding the luxury of a dip before dinner hard to resist. Furthermore, they are realizing that a pool need not be a lake—a small one can aid inestimably to the attractiveness of a home and to the fun of life.

The swimming pools popular in this area fall under these five general types:

N ANY GATHERING of out-of-door chefs, you always can start a good argument on the subject of sauces. Each one has his favorite, and there are many schools of thought on what makes a perfect sauce. Corresponding cuts from lamb, pork and veal are suitable, too. They include lamb shoulder and leg chops, fresh pork picnic shoulder and shoulder chops, and veal shoulder and leg steaks.

A Differest Technique.

These cuts and others which are usually braised, such as pork loin and rib chops and liver take a little different technique than usual for barbeeuing. The steaks and chops are marinated in a lemon juice or vinegar and fat mixture which helps to suit them for this method of cookery. While they are cooking, they may be basted with the sauce of additional flavor.

The pot-roasts and steaks which are usually braised, are braised outdoors, too. They are browned over direct heat, then seasoned and wrapped tightly in foil to continue cooking. The steam which forms inside the foil provides the necessary moisture. Sometimes a sauce is poured over the meat before the foil is elosed.

MAYROSE HAM STEAK PLANTATION STYLE WITH BROOKS BARBECUE SAUCE. Chefs prefer this way of cooking ham steaks. Slash the fat around the edges and slather with Brooks Barbecue Sauce (its smooth, spicy-rich flavor brings out the wonderful Mayrose taste). Grill 6 inches above the coals. In about 25 minutes you'll have the tenderest, juiciest ham steak in towns.

TO KEEP MAYROSE HOT DOGS PLUMP AND JUICY. Grill just 4 inches above the coals. At that distance, the heat brings out the flavor without shrinking the meat. Turn franks without piercing them and they'll stay just as plump and juicy as when you started. Serve with Brooks Barbecue Sauce in toasted frankfurter rolls for a real treat.

Welder-Turned Writer Shows a Fine Talent

By John Crosby

NEW YORK, May 9. TENDELL MAYES is a man who has been rather belatedly kissed by destiny. He has been everything from a truckdriver to an actor, and even now his application for a job as a welder is still on

JOHN CROSBY

Just a couple of weeks ago Mayes made his debut as writer. Specifically he wrote a fine poignant TV play called "No Riders" about a truck driver's acquisition of a small Mexican boy.

It was a very distinctive piece in which the dialogue was cut down to the minimal requirements and it the attention of Leland Hayward, who Mayes to write the screenplay for the

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Charles A. Lindbergh story, "The Spirit of St. Louis." Mayes is in Hollywood this very moment doing just that. For a guy who was trying to pursue a career in welding just a couple of weeks ago, this is more than somewhat astonishing. Ever since television has come along, things have moved at a terribly acceler-

I BRING all this up because Mayes's second TV play, "Hang Up My Guns," was on view the other night. I cannot pretend that "Hang Up My Guns" was anywhere near as good as "No Riders" because the wasn't. But again Mayes showed a great gift for writing about inarticulate people—one character, the mother of a family of mountaineers never says a word—and the play was written with great tenderness. "Hang Up My Guns" is about a family of mountaineers named Cox who are the remnants of the great feuding families of the nineteenth century. The Coxes have resided on Cox mountain for nigh on to 20 years, never venturing into town and completely unaware that life and particularly the processes of law and order have changed markedly since the old days.

THE YOUNGEST COX ventures down the mountain to do odd jobs and gets implicated in a double murder he didn't commit. However, an aging sheriff, fearful he will lose his job unless he finds a culprit, pins the crime on him. Down from the mountainside comes the Cox tribe, shootin' 'arns in hand, to rescue their kinfolk in the old style way.

Right here a young lawyer, very well played by Harry Townes, steps in to take up the cudgels for the Cox boy in the modern, legal way, and to restrain the mountaineers from using their shootin' 'arns. He succeeds in both objectives. As a whole, the play didn't have the single-minded punch of Mayes's first play. But it 'did have well drawn' characters, some terribly authoritative mountain language and some fine scenes. I especially like a scene where the young lawyer tries to pound some contemporary horsessense into the elder Cox while both men are partaking heavily of the old to pound some contemporary horsesense into the elder Cox while both men are partaking heavily of the old

Cox while both men are partaking heavily of the old man's flery moonshine.

Mayes seems to be a really authentic American talent with a fine ear for American speech patterns and great knowledge of rather out-of-the-way people. So far there have been no villains in his play. Even a sheriff who has lost his nerve is not such a bad guy.

THE SAME NIGHT "Hang Up My Guns" was presented, "Climax" did John Galsworthy's "The First and the Last." This again opened with a murder and again the murder was relatively unimportant; again an innocent man was convicted of it and this fact messed up a lot of lives. Right there all resemblance ceased. Galsworthy's was one of those problem plays in which each bit of action seemed to be part of an argument in ethics rather than the behavior of rational human beings. Mayes operated closer to the level of in essent up a lot of lives. Right there all resemblance ceased. Galsworthy's was one of those problem plays in which each bit of action seemed to be part of an argument in ethics rather than the behavior of rational human beings. Mayes operated closer to the level of humanity, and on the whole I prefer it.

St. Louis Sixth Graders Turn Camp Into Outdoor Classroom for Week

By Mary Kimbrough

THE science class studied moss-covered rocks on the side of a shady stream while arithmetic students balanced bank accounts and members of the art group finished their Mother's day gifts in an open air crafts shop. Far from the sound of school bells and traffic, the sixth grades of Mallinckrodt and Lindenwood schools were in session.

in session.

The sky was a roof over their classroom, the grass was the floor for their gym. Blue jeans or shorts—even for the teachers—were accepted attire and an assortment of pets ranging from a white rabbit to lizards and harmless snakes attended class.

It was all in a part of the one-week school camp at Camp Wyman, Kiwanis-operated Community Chest site near Eureka, Mo., where more than 100 city-bred sixth-graders last week put into practice much of what they had learned from their text-books.

had learned from their text-books.

In school, they had read about cirrus clouds and how wind ve-locity helps determine the weath-er. At camp, one group each day made its own weather predic-tions. In school, they had read about the stars, but with city skies dimmed by garish, man-made lights, few had the chance to study the heavens until they spent warm spring nights in the country. At school, they studied addition and subtraction. At camp they had their own bank accounts and wrote checks for candy bars and stamps.

Dorothy Pillman, sixth grade teacher at Mallinckrodt, the outing, an annual event for the past ing, an annual event for the past several years, has become a happy tradition. But for all its informality, its nicknames and singing and impromptu skits and afternoon rest periods, its volley ball games and "cook-outs," it was not just a leisurely vacation for either pupils or convenient for either pupils or counselors. It was learning at the "grass-roots" level.

The camp convened Sunday, The camp convened Sunday, April 29, and broke up yesterday. Wise eating shows in your figure, for diet is the most effective weight regulator we have. Sometimes 10 or 15 pounds can make the difference between a bony, unattractive figure and a charming, graceful slenderness that we all desire. It's terrible to be angular and underweight as all slim-janes know. And here's a warning... the bony older woman looks older than her pleasingly padded sister. Putting on weight is not a fast process. It takes the very thin twice as much perseverence to gain an ounce as it takes the woman with the opposite problem to lose.

IF YOU need to put on a few ounds, first consult your doctor to find out why you don't gain weight. Of course, if he says you have a hyperactive thyroid gland, are anemic, or have some other physical problem, you must be guided by his instructions.

But, if everything is normal, you will have to work out a weight-gaining, padding diet with high calorie foods.

THE FOODS you will want to eat liberally include: Butter (more than one tablespoon daily), cream, meat, foods that are rich in carbohydrates. Drink at least six glasses of fortified milk each day. Eat desserts at lunch and dinner.

When a sash just won't budge, the best solution is to gently pry off the stop bead so that the sash can be pulled out of the frame. Examine the edges of the sash and if there are any accumulations of paint, sand them off. Put the sash back into the frame and check to see if it But there was no time for loafing or homesickness. "In the several years I've been coming to camp," said Miss Donzelot, "the only cases of home-sickness I've found, strangely enough, have been among the boys. But it has never been a problem. "One youngster had a diffi-cult time and came to me saying he had sobbed himself to sleep because he was homesick. I talked with him and tried to help him as best I could. Final-ly on Thursday of the camp week, he came to me and said, 'Donnie, I've licked it. Now I know I can stay.'"

Now coat the edges of the sash with a wood preservative or lin-seed oil so that the exposed wood won't absorb moisture.

It's best not to apply paint to this edge. Rub some paraffin or wax on the edge of the sash and put it back and replace the stop bead. You shouldn't have any trouble now unless the next time the window is painted, someone pours paint into the seam between sash and frame.

(Eighth of a Series.)

By the early 1930s, Greta Garbo had all the haberdashery of success. She was famous and wealthy. Her artistry had won her the respect of her colleagues, the adoration of untold millions and the appreciation of international intellectuals who ordinarily thought movie stars were trash. She was acciaimed the most beautiful woman in the world. And she was still young, in her middle twenties. The natural, psychological question was: why, with all this, was she a weary and tormented soul, confused in mind and heart? She had in abundance everything the human condition requires—except, perhaps, love. oil has built a new Texas numan condition requires—ex-cept, perhaps, love.

Since Mauritz Stiller, Garbo had encountered no men who were giants. Reaching out for mastery, as her disposition dic-tated, she found the would-be-masters cast up by Hollywood to be only life-size and therefore-unacceptable.

Her desire to escape from the eyes of the world became obsessional. She was no longer content with her house on Chevy Chase road; word had reached the public that she lived there. the public that she lived there. Fans began writing her at home, and a few boldly came to the door and asked for her. Furthermore, the houses on either side were two-story structures, from the upper floors of which it was possible to see into parts of Garbo's garden and pool. The feeling that she was being spied upon made Garbo uneasy. To avoid being looked at she sometimes got up at five in the morning to have a swim and waited until after dark to take an evening dip.

and moved into another house in Beyerly Hills that Harry Eding-ton, her agent, had found for her. The new residence, on Cam-den drive, had the advantage of comparative isolation, but the comparative isolation, but the noise of streetcars operating on a trolley line a block and a half away kept Garbo awake at night. Though she had taken a year's lease on the house, at $600 a month, she soon decided that it wouldn't do.

Moving again, she settled her Moving again, she settled her few belongings into another rented property, this one on San Vicente boulevard in the Brent-wood section of Santa Monica. The Brentwood house, surrounded by enormous cypress trees that hid it completely from the street and from neighbors on all sides, satisfied Garbo's desire for seclusion.

"This is where I will live as long as I stay in Hollywood," she told Edington the day she moved in.

Having shut herself off from the world, Garbo became almost frantically jealous of what she called her "private life." She refused to speak to former close personal and professional asso-ciates whom she suspected of having talked about her to any-

S OMETIMES, when the mood was on her, Garbo would revert to her old habit of shutting herself off from everyone with no word of explanation. One day shortly before Christmas in 1931, a close friend called at Garbo's house, keeping an appointment made the called at Garbo's house, keeping an appointment made the day before. "Miss Garbo has gone out," the housekeeper said. The caller asked when Miss Garbo was expected to return. "I really couldn't say," the housekeeper replied. "She has gone out to New York."

Without informing anybody outside of her household, Garbo had packed a bag and gone East to spend the holidays by herself. She had slipped into New York one had singled into New York unobtrusively and registered at the Hotel St. Moritz as "Gussie Berger," Her presence in Man-hattan was not discovered for several days. On at least one occasion, Garbo's devious theater-going tactics defeated her purpose. This occurred when she attended a performance of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" starring Kathwite Carolli Carol arine Cornell.

arine Cornell.

"There was no indication of any kind that she was in New York," Miss Cornell has recalled in her autobiography, "and one Wednesday matinee a woman with her coat collar pulled up, hat pulled down, hands held across her face, walked up to the box office and bought a ticket. Her mysterious behavior attracted the attention of the doorman, and he sent an usher down tracted the attention of the door-man, and he sent an usher down to see if she was quite well. The usher went up to her, looked, gasped and came rushing back gibbering. 'It's Greta Garbo!' In a minute the word was all over the theater — backstage and frontstage. We couldn't get the curtain up because the actors were so busy peeking through holes in the curtain."

Miss Cornell, however, was Miss Cornell, however, was not certain that the mysterious spectator was actually Garbo, nor were some other members of the cast, in an effort to setof the cast, in an effort to settle the argument going on backstage, Miss Cornell summoned her husband, the director Guthrie McClintic, who was at home and who had once been introduced to Garbo in Hollywood, to rush to the theater. Peering from the wings, McClintic identified the customer in question as the genuine article. His identification was not, however, accepted as positive by several other backstage witnesses. Matters were still up in the air when, some 20 minutes after the curtain had gone down, the cause of the argument presented herself at the stage door and asked

When word of this development circulated through the dressing rooms, something resembling pandemonium broke loose. Since the stranger had not given her name and since Miss Cornell was firmly convinced that she was the intended victim of a practi-cal joke, she had her regrets conveyed to the caller.

"Miss Co-o-rnell, I see, does not like strangers," the woman who had been kept waiting at the stage door for five or six minutes said, and walked away.

THE minute she left, the argument resumed, more intense and noisier than before, and continued the rest of the day and into the night. "Finally at about 2 o'clock I called the coast and asked if Garbo was in New York," Miss Cornell wrote. "The answer came back emphatically, 'No.' Then we began checking, and it finally turned out that she was in New York and had been to see the "Barretts" on that afternoon. So I sent her a note, apologized for my rudeness, and asked her to come for supper at asked her to come for supper at the house. This she did, about 10 days later, and I can't re-member ever having a pleas-anter evening. Miss Garbo turned out to be as delightful, as charming, as simple and as humorous a person as you could imagine."

Her contract with M-G-M, signed in 1927, expired in June, 1932. By that time she had made 17 American films. During her seven years in Hollywood, her earnings from motion pictures had exceeded $1,300,000. The had exceeded $1,300,000. The income-tax rates in effect during Garbo's early money-making years were comparatively low. Furthermore, her style of living had been notably modest. Thus, at the age of 26, Garbo had become a millionaire.

It was no secret that she had tired of making American pictures. What would she do, now that she was freed of her contract and financially independent? Two days before the expiration of Garbo's contract, her business manager issued the long - awaited announcement, Miss Garbo, he said, planned to leave Hollywood soon for "an indefinite stay in Sweden." That

Garbo astonished Hollywood and titillated her fans by picking John Gilbert to play the role of her lover in "Queen Christina." The touching story circulated

The touching story circulated that she had selected Gilbert for the choice part to prop up his sagging career. Professionally, Gilbert had been on his uppers since appearing in his first talking picture, "His Glorious Night." He had been done in primarily by his high, thin voice, which seemed incongruous in a personality built up on the screen as a great lover. When he first said, "I love you," in the talkies, audiences snickered; some laughed cruelly.

Garbo's selection of Gilbert was not, it would seem, a strictly sentimental gesture. She had previously given careful consideration to a number of other more likely contenders, including Laurence Offivier. After rehearsing love scenes with him, however, Garbo announced that he wouldn't do. It was then that she decided to give Gilbert as the colleged to give Gilbert and the wouldn't do. Garbo's attitude toward Gilbert on the set was friendly but professional. At one point the script called for a love scene of the more or less uninhibited kind that had done much to make Garbo and Gilbert famous. When they rehearsed the scene the first time, Gilbert responded with his old enthusiasm. Afterwards, according to another member of the cast, Garbo sugmember of the cast, Garbo suggested to the director, Rouben Mamoulian, that the scene be played with somewhat less in-

Though Garbo's performance naturally dominated the picture, everything else in the production—the scenario, direction, supporting cast—was also praised, except the work of Gilbert. Little attention was p.id to him in the reviews; in some he wasn't even mentioned. The knell for Gilbert, who only six years before had first electrified audiences with Garbo in "Flesh and the Devil," was toll-

While deploring Hollywood's lopsided respect for legal tender, Garbo was not grossly negligent in looking after her own purse. Before starting her next film, "The Painted Veil," she managed, with the able assistance of Harry Edington, to raise her salary per picture from $250,000 to $270,000. At the same time Edington informed Louis B. Mayer that Garbo, already the highest-priced player in Hollywood, was forehandedly giving some thought to a

Frederick W. Crumb, president of the college, took me to see their new library and the nucleus of a collection of modern paintings which they are beginning to establish.

Martha Carr's Hairdos for ARG. U.S. PAT. OFF. OPINION=

Dear Martha:

AM a bachelor 34 years old, living with my widowed 6 mother. I have gone with a half-dozen girls but every time I get serious about one of them my mother tries to break it up. She is almost sickly sweet to the girl, but she keeps telling her in my presence how terrible it will be for her when I leave her and how lonely she will be. I love my mother, Martha, but I'm tired of being tied to her apron strings and I think she's being unfair. I am very much in love with a to be married. I have put it off for several months

I have to make up my mind whether to marry her or break off. I don't blame her but at the same time I don't want to hurt Mother.

You love the girl and she's the kind of person you want for your wife? Then go ahead and marry. Why should your mother have the right to dominate and dictate with her tears and whines of self-pity. Sure, she may be lonely. So are other widowed mothers until they realize they can't run their children's lives and then get out and build rich and full lives for themselves. I don't think you need be harsh with your mother. After all, you do owe her loyalty and affection. But that doesn't mean you have to be a slave to her and give up every chance of happiness just to keep her company. See if you can make some arrangement about a housekeeper or companion, make sure she is comfortable and in no financial need, be sure that both you and your girl continue to show your interest and concern-then go right ahead to the marriage license bureau.

Dear Martha:

ABOUT TWO AND ONE-HALF MONTHS AGO a school friend of mine introduced her brother to me and we hit it off right away. It seemed as if I had known him for years. Since then I have seen him only three times. Now an association I belong to is planning a formal dance and I would like to ask him. Is it all right for a girl to ask a boy when she has never dated him? A GIRL IN DOUBT.

As long as your association is entertaining, you have the right to ask whomever you wish. Since you know this boy apparently likes you-even though he hasn't asked you for a date—I see nothing wrong in inviting him. Make sure though that he doesn't go steady, or you could embarrass both yourself and him. If he does go with you, then fails to ask for a date, don't invite him again,

'Life With a View'

KNOW from my own experience that an exciting idea can pull one out of seemingly extreme fatigue and revitalize one, while boredom can make a person feel absolutely

If you take your responsibilities seriously you may have gotten into the habit of having your problems with you all the time. You may not think consciously of them but they pop up on you several times during the day, make you sleep poorly at night, and even show in the tensions in the muscles of your body. If you are under great pressure try to adopt this JOSEPHINE LOWMAN attitude. In the first place do everything you can to solve the problem, and if you can't do anything about it, shrug your emotional shoulders, and decide to have a little fun anyway. Untense!

THE GRIM ATTITUDE will damage you and will hinder rather than aid you in arriving at any possible solution. In the meantime there is the sunshine, the moonlight, the blossoming flowers of spring. There is, also the great sweep of life which is so much bigger than we or any of our individual problems.

Surely, do what you can about your problems which I know in many instances are pressing, but live too. It doesn't help you to remain all tensed and it detracts from the sum total of human happiness, because you are not alone. What you are affects those with whom you come in contact, even in the most casual situations.

LIFE CAN BE WONDERFUL in any situation if you will remain aware of this viewpoint, but you have to give yourself a chance. You have to have a view. Your view may be a large one or it may have to consist of the rambling roses you planted by your modest home. No matter, they both can be beautiful. If you have a long, thin face, shun long hair. Choose a medium-short style with some softness in the curl, but not too curly. Too much width at the sides will also emphasize the narrow shape of your face.

A side-part is becoming to most face-shapes, especially round faces. Thin faces find high side parts and center parts more becoming.

Bangs are for girls with high preheads. Don't let them grow too long or they'll give you a shaggy-dog look. Bangs are usually better for a slender face, for they accent width . . and better if you don't wear glasses all the time.

Definition Of a Good Secretary

By Ruth Millett

WHAT are the qualifications of a good secretary? Girls who are about to go out into the business world should be interested in the answer given to that question by Anne Moore, member of the Institute for Certifying Secretaries.

Technical qualifications of a ood secretary, Miss Moore says,

The ability to handle dictation with such ease that she will not be under pressure. Good typing and filing ability. Orderliness in her work. The possession of common

BUT MIND YOU those are just the "technical" qualifications. They can help a girl get a good job and even hold it. But for a young woman to become the kind of second right arm a man eventually comes to feel he couldn't possibly get along without, a secretary has to have many of the qualities that a wife needs to keep a man happy at home.

She has to be able to make

She has to be able to make the boss feel that he is tops among men of his own business or profession. For a man's ego often needs reassurance during the business day, just as it needs building up when the working day is over.

She has to be able to use her own initiative and yet not make her employer feel that she thinks her employer feel that she thinks she knows more than he does. A secretary's "I though that was how you would like to have the matter handled" is just a diplomatic way of saying, "I figured out a way to handle that situation and went ahead and took care of it." It is the same technique a wife uses when she says, "I didn't want to worry you with it so I went ahead and did suchand-such."

SHE HAS TO BE a credit to her boss—both in appearance and in her manner to others. A secretary's being a fast typist or a wife's being an excellent cook are not alone enough to make a man proud when he says, "Will you take that matter up with my secretary?" or "I want you to meet my wife."

First, read the daily newspapers for a complete background on the Bond Issue. Pick out a suitable subject for your poster. As examples, here are just a few of the projects included in the May 26th voting:

Improvements at the Art Museum New Libraries. Improvements at the Zoo. New bridges and viaducts New fire fighting equipment. New recreational facilities. New expressways Neighborhood Rehabilitation Slum clearance.

Or, if you prefer, your poster can be all-inclusive, concerning itself with the Bond Issue as a whole. Whatever subject you pick, remember that the prime message you want to get across is to VOTE YES IN THE BOND ISSUE OF MAY 26!

Here Are the Rules

Using one or more of the Bond Issue subjects listed under "WHAT TO DO," design a poster (in color or black and white) on a standard poster card, 20 inches by 26 inches or smaller. Contest opens today. Either mail it or bring it to LACLEDE GAS COMPANY, Eleventh and Olive Streets, St. Louis 1, Mo., before 5:00 p.m. on Wednesday, May 18, 1955. There, it will be judged by civic officials on the basis of originality and neatness. Duplicate prizes in case of ties. After judging, posters will be displayed in downtown store windows.

EACH POSTER ENTRANT SHOULD HAVE THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION ATTACHED:

- NAME OF ENTRANT
- · NAME OF SCHOOL
- GRADE
- ADDRESS OF ENTRANT · NAME OF TEACHER

IT WILL HELP ST. LOUIS! IT'S EASY! IT'S FUN!

Uncle Ray's Column

By Ramon Coffman

FEW weeks ago a group of boys and girls paid me a visit. They wanted to form a club, and we had the first meeting (lasting about an hour) on the lawn near my home.

In advance of the meeting I chatted with 14-year-old Kay and 15-year-old Dorothy. I told them I was wondering what to write about during May, and they made a few suggestions.

they made a few suggestions.

ONE SERIES which we settled on was to be about music. "I think you should write about drums," said Dorothy.

"She says that because her boy friend plays a drum," said Kay. "It seems to me that spring suggests soft music."

Perhaps both those girls had good ideas. I plan to take up questions about drums next week and today I shall say a few words about instruments which offer soft music.

The guitar ranks among the softer instruments. It is used widely in Spain, and may have been invented in that country.

A modern guitar has six strings. In this way it differs from some of the early guitars, which had as few as three strings.

THE HARP is another instru-ment which makes soft music. It is far older than the guitar, the piano or the violin. The drum may be older than the harp, but it produces music which differs widely from the soft notes of the harp.

Large harps were developed and played by the people of ancient Egypt. The proofs of this include Egyptian pictures which date back more than 3000 years.

Judging by the pictures, Egyptian harps seldom had more than a dozen strings. In Europe the number of strings rose during the Middle Ages. These instruments were popular in Ireland, England, Wales and Germany.

Modern harps usually (but not always) have 46 strings. Some of the strings are made of gut, others of wire.
